सूरज पर कविता

रोज सुबह को सूरज आकर
सबको सुदु अगाता हैं।
शाम हुई लाली फैलाकर
अपने घर को आता हैं।

दिनभर खुद को जला - जलाकर
यह प्रकाश फैलाता हैं।

उसका जाला ही जीला हैं।
जो काम सभी को आता हैं।
जो काम सभी के आता हैं।

The Chitrāpur 'Teru'!

by Sāadhanā Kāikiṇī

Raghu smiled as the drum-beats, the pure notes of the shehnāī and the sweet sound of the temple bells combined to form a symphony. Eyes turned towards the Shivagaṅgā Sarovara as H.H. Swāmījī walked towards Shrī Rāmāñjaneya. It had begun - the celebration that he never got tired of watching! The scorching mid-day sun was no deterrent to the hundreds who thronged the Rathagadde to watch Shrī Bhavānīshaṅkar in all His Glory. Raghu's eyes darted from one sight to another - the gaily decorated Ratha with the red and white small flags, the different locally grown vegetables that adorned the lower side and colourful shops that had sprouted on either side of the field.

Soon after Shrī Bhavānīshaṅkar was carried up the stairs and seated within the Ratha, Raghu ran to hold the rope and pull it, along with the others. Men, women and children tugged at the strong ropes and waited for the signal. H.H. Swāmījī rang the bell - an indication for the devotees to use their might and take the Ratha slightly forward.

The sound of 'Om Namaḥ Pārvatīpataye Hara Hara Mahādeva' was heard resonating all around as the Ratha moved forward. Raghu clapped his hands in delight. His mother looked at him proudly. Her Raghu looked so happy! Together they walked in for the welcome 'Pānaka' that was waiting for them!
